

WISEACRES CANNOT NAME THE WINNER

Congressional Fight in Eighth District Becoming More and More Complex.

JUDGE MARSHALL STRONG

Went to Hear Beecher in New York Once, and Friend Almost Broke Up Meeting.

BY WALTER EDWARD HARRIS.
WASHINGTON, D. C., May 21.—It is less than a month until the Democratic primary in the Eighth Virginia District, yet the result thereof is as much a matter of doubt as it was two months ago. In fact, The Times-Dispatch correspondent finds it a matter of difficulty to secure from a Virginian in Washington from the Eighth District an expression of opinion favorable to the chances of any other than the particular one the voter is supporting.

This was also very evident yesterday, when, after spending a day at Fairfax, and talking with citizens come to hear Judge Nicol and Mr. Gordon discuss issues, I came back to Washington convinced that the situation is about as much "mixed" as could well be. Fairfax will cast a decided majority for Judge Nicol, according to the impressions of the sovereignty of the courthouse yesterday. It would appear as though each of the four candidates is claiming all the other counties of the district. Mr. Gordon said, in the course of his speech, that his friends assured him that he would come from Louisa to Lapidian with eighteen hundred votes. His friends claim that if this promise is made good, his nomination is assured.

But the other candidates are making claims just as glowing, and predictions of the success of Mr. Ryan and Mr. Carlin and Judge Nicol are just as cheering. Mr. Ryan, who was at the Metropolitan Hotel to-day, said he was satisfied with the outlook, and he believed there was no reason to change the opinion expressed a month ago that he would win the nomination.

Arouse Fairfax Voters.
Probably two hundred and fifty people heard Judge Nicol and Mr. Gordon speak at Fairfax yesterday. Many of the farmers did not hear the speeches, owing to business requiring their attention on the outside, and beside, the courtroom was filled, many ladies honoring the speakers with their presence. Each speaker took over an hour to show the voters that the welfare of the Eighth District demanded that he be sent to Congress, and each succeeded in evoking many expressions of approval. In fact, the enthusiasm was pronounced.

Hon. John W. Yerkes, late commissioner of internal revenue and Republican candidate for the governorship of Kentucky, attended the meeting at Fairfax, the guest of Hon. R. Walton Moore. Mr. Yerkes has recently resigned the office of internal revenue commissioner to engage in the practice of law in this city, and is a dispossessed of Virginia people, lawyers, politicians and good citizens. He said he had rarely enjoyed a day more. He had some rather humorous experiences.

"That fellow Gordon made a good speech," remarked one citizen to Mr. Yerkes, after the meeting.

"A very good speech," said Mr. Yerkes, "but it isn't always the best speaker that makes the best representative."

"I reckon you ain't for Gordon?" suggested the farmer.

"No, I'm not," was the reply.

"For Judge Nicol?" inquired the farmer.

"No," was the reply.

"I expect you're for Ryan," the farmer said, "winning great curiosity as to the predictions of Mr. Yerkes."

"No," was the answer.

"Then you're for Ryan?"

"No."

The old farmer gave a loud snort of disgust, thinking he had found a voter of the district who was not taking sides. But he joined in the laugh which followed, when he overheard Mr. Yerkes tell a voter that he was a citizen of Kentucky.

Was Himself the Man.

"Are you any kin to the man named Yerkes, who used to live in Danville, Ky?" asked a Mr. Franklin, who was introduced to Mr. Yerkes by Mr. Moore. Franklin had a Grand Army button on his lapel.

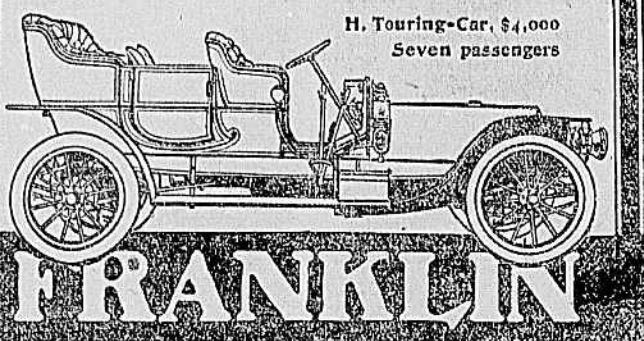

"Yes, I am kin to him," replied Mr. Yerkes, who is "the" Yerkes of Danville.

"I was provost marshal of Danville during the war," replied Mr. Franklin.

"Are you any kin to the Yerkes, of Kentucky, whom I heard make a speech at the Republican National Convention in Philadelphia in 1900?" inquired Mr. Franklin further.

"Yes, I am kin to him, too," was the answer.

"A blamed fine speech," said Mr. Franklin.

The conversation did not proceed further, and Mr. Franklin does not know that he was complimenting the speech to the man who made it.

"Cyclone" Jim Marshall has gone to New York again. It is believed he has also got back to his home in Craig, although there is no positive evidence on this point. Judge Nicol is responsible for the statement that Judge Marshall has made a recent visit to the national metropolis. He said in his speech yesterday that he met the judge on a railway train recently, and the latter told him he was on his way to New York. Judge Marshall said it was his second visit to the great city. The first was soon after the war, when he went thither to take a drove of cattle. He was accompanied by a young man just out of the Confederate army and as fine a soldier as any that followed General Lee. When Sunday came Judge Marshall and his old comrade went to hear Henry Ward Beecher preach. They knew Mr. Beecher was the worst enemy the South had at the North, but they wanted to hear him. Mr. Beecher took for his text a verse of Scripture, book, chapter and verse not supplied by Judge Marshall, foretelling how the North, the East, the West and the South should appear in judgment at the last day.

Mr. Beecher went on to say that each section should be represented at the last great day. "Even a few from that section from which we think so little," he said, "will be represented."

"Cyclone" said the preacher. This was too much for the fiery blood of Judge Marshall's companion, and he jumped to his feet.

Interrupted Beecher.

"The hell you say?" he exclaimed, in his excitement.

Instantly several ushers rushed towards him, but the young fellow climbed over several seats, and reaching the aisle, ran out of the door and up the street and escaped.

Judge Marshall met Mr. Beecher in Richmond several years afterwards. Mr. Beecher had come to deliver a lecture, and Judge Marshall was a member of the State Senate. Judge Marshall related the incident to the distinguished divine, but Mr. Beecher said that while he remembered the sermon very well, he could not recall the interruption. Judge Marshall's friends have not yet heard whether he had any thrilling experiences on the occasion of the last trip to New York.

But this is all a long way from the contest for the Democratic nomination to Congress from the Eighth Virginia District. The atmosphere of the old Colonial town of Fairfax conduces to digression. In fact, despite the eloquence, on tap yesterday, some of the visitors could not resist slipping away and browsing among the yellow records of the county in the clerk's office, where the will of George Washington may be seen, kept in a wooden case, with a glass cover, so that the visitor may see without touching the document. Various entries in the records refer to the father of his country, and to Lord Fairfax, and George Mason and other worthies, whose memories and names will survive the shock of all change.

The primary will be held June 19th. Either Judge Nicol, or Mr. Gordon, or

Mr. Ryan, or Mr. Carlin will be nominated. That is the only safe prediction as to the outcome that can be made.

CANDIDATES HAVE GREAT MEETING

Nicol, Gordon and Carlin Address Voters of Alexandria—All Are Well Received.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
ALEXANDRIA, VA., May 21.—Judge Charles E. Nicol, R. Lindsay Gordon and C. C. Carlin, candidates for Congress from this district, addressed a mammoth mass-meeting at the Opera House here to-night. Mr. Carlin opened with a very brief address. He was followed by R. Lindsay Gordon, who delivered a long address, in which he took occasion to score Judge Nicol's platform. His address was well received.

Judge Nicol, when he appeared, upon the rostrum, was received with loud applause. Judge Nicol ably defended his platform. He then briefly touched on questions of national interest. Throughout his speech, he was frequently applauded.

Dr. Myers did not ask one question of Thurman, but only observed him through the bars, taking notes as he did so. During the observation Thurman sat upon a bunk in his cell smoking a pipe and reading a newspaper.

Man Charged With Killing Another With Ax Meanwhile Reads Paper.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
NORFOLK, VA., May 21.—Thomas Lassiter, alias Thom Price, alias Tom Harris, colored, charged with the murder of Charles W. Parks, of Berkeley Ward, on April 28th, tried in the Corporation Court to-day before Judge Allan R. Hance and a jury of twelve, was found guilty of murder in the first degree.

The hearing of Lassiter's case was one of the shortest recorded on the criminal docket in Norfolk. The hearing of evidence was begun at 11:45 and by 2 o'clock it was all in for both the Commonwealth and defendant, and the arguments by counsel had been concluded. The jury left the courtroom with the case at 2 o'clock, remained in the room for three minutes, and returned with the verdict of guilty in the first degree.

Lassiter, with William McIntosh, already convicted of murdering Parks, met in a saloon in Berkeley Ward and decided to make "easy money." Parks was knocked down with an iron pipe, and never regained consciousness.

Sanity of Thurman.

The examination into the sanity of Dr. C. Thurman, charged with the murder of W. P. Dolson, was begun to-day in the city jail by Dr. H. L. Myers, an alienist, who was designated by Commonwealth's Attorney Tilton to make the examination.

After observing Thurman for a few minutes Dr. Myers retired, remarking to City Sergeant Lawler as he did so that he could not determine or form any idea as to the sanity or insanity of Thurman from his simple observation.

Commonwealth's Attorney Tilton will endeavor to secure the service of Dr. L. S. Farmer, superintendent of the Norfolk Protestant Hospital, and formerly superintendent of the Eastern State Hospital for the Insane at Williamsburg, to make a close examination of the prisoner.

Dr. Myers did not ask one question of Thurman, but only observed him through the bars, taking notes as he did so. During the observation Thurman sat upon a bunk in his cell smoking a pipe and reading a newspaper.
